[redacted] entered the United States (U.S.) approximately three months prior to his detention on a two week visitors visa which his mother obtained on his behalf from the United States Embassy in Tel Aviv, Israel. [redacted] did not know the reason the visa was limited to two weeks as he had previously visited the U.S. in 2000 on a six month visa. [redacted] was advised by [redacted] that the [redacted] position at Urban Moving Company was available after [redacted] was moved from [redacted] to [redacted]. [redacted] made arrangements with Urban's [redacted] for [redacted] to take [redacted] position prior to [redacted] travel to the United States. Upon his arrival in the U.S., [redacted] paid a female attorney, whose name [redacted] cannot recall, $325 to extend his visa. The attorney advised [redacted] it would take three to four months to process. [redacted] was advised by his friends that as long as [redacted] took steps to extend the visa, it was legal for [redacted] to stay beyond the expiration date of his visa. [redacted] knew before he traveled to the United States that he would overstay his visa and that he would be obtaining employment in violation of U.S. law.

[REDACTED] was arrested for desertion and spent forty five days in the brig. Upon his release, [REDACTED] was sent back to his anti-tank unit but was assigned to Headquarters and not with the other foot soldiers. [REDACTED] was not given anything to do and he just sat around. [REDACTED] was soon transferred to a communications unit and [REDACTED] refused the transfer. Because of his refusal, [REDACTED] was thrown in the brig for seven days. Upon his release, [REDACTED] refused to report to his new assignment.
